LeadershipPlenty

LeadershipPlenty is a program developed by the Pew Partnership for Civic change and offered on the Prairie through the Horizons program of the Northwest Area Foundation. It is designed to equip community members with skills like effective communication, conflict management, and partnership building that they can use to work together as leaders in their region.

Leadership at its core is about change—within individuals, organizations and communities. LeadershipPlenty was created with the idea that many talented and resourceful formal and informal leaders are needed to build and maintain a thriving community. The program focuses on bringing those talents and resources to the table to assist communities in achieving their goals.

To enrich education through diversity, the University of Idaho is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer and educational institution.

Who Should Attend?

The goal of LeadershipPlenty is to make civic leadership training available to every person in a community. It is especially valuable for:

- Emerging leaders who want to learn new skills in order to address community issues
- Newcomers to a community who have not yet been asked to help
- Young people who want to work with others to effect change
- Established leaders who want to work together for common purposes.

The skills introduced in LeadershipPlenty will help in every phase of life—family, work, and community.

There is not lack of leadership in rural Idaho communities—there are plenty of people with untapped talents that can make their community stronger.
